PECULIAR ACCIDENT RESULTS IN DEATH OF POPULAR YOUNG MAN

Slips And Falls Through Plate Glass Window Re- ceiving Death Wounds

WAS VETERAN OF WORLD WAR

Myron B. Jobs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Jobs, of 627 McKean avenue, died this morning at 2 o'clock at the Charleroi-Monessen hospital, as the result of severe cuts inflicted by pieces of falling plate glass a few hours previous. The accident which resulted in the young man's death occurred at the upper vestibule of the McCrory 5 and 10 cent store on Fifth street, and it happened so quickly that eyewitnesses are at a loss to explain how it really took place.

From what can be learned however the young man with a number of companions were assembled at the corner of Fifth and McKean. Some say that it was a race between Myron and two of his companions, Thornton Burnett and Cecil Ritchey as to which could reach the scales setting in the McCrory vestibule, for the purpose of getting weighted. Jobs reached the scales first, but it is believed that when he struck the tile floor his feet slipped. In order to save himself he reached out his left hand and grabbed hold of the scales. His momentum was so great that he pulled the scales over with him and he crashed through the lower side window, one of the largest pieces of plate glass in town. He evidently fell on his right side for either protruding jagged edges of the glass, or falling pieces from above inflicted a severe wound on the upper part of the left leg, near the body, severing the veins and the arteries, from which the blood gushed in a pulsating stream.

As soon as he could arise from his position he grasped his leg and started across the street, sitting down or some ice cream tubs just opposite the McCrory store. His companions quickly followed and endeavored to stay the flow of blood by arranging a tourniquet, but their efforts proving unavailing the young man was carried to the office of Dr. Davis, who in company with Dr. Hill worked over him for some time endeavoring to stop the blood flow. After giving him first aid, he was taken to the Charleroi-Monessen hospital, where he died at 2 o'clock, from shock and loss of blood.

The tragic ending of the accident was a great shock to the community as Myron was a well known and popular young man, and great sympathy is expressed for his parents and brother in this very sudden and tragic bereavement.

Myron served in the great war as a member of the 26th Engineers. He enlisted when he was but eighteen years of age in Pittsburgh in 1917. He was sent to Philadelphia and after training two weeks at Camp Dix was sent with his regiment to France, where he served for two years, when he was mustered out of the service.

NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AT FAIRHOPE

Officials of the Marion Presbyterian church at Fairhope last week signed a contract for the erection of a new church building on their property, which will cost about 16,000. The new building will be 40x60 feet, with a Sunday school room in the rear 20x40 feet. The Ladies Aid Society has already donated $1,000 to the building fund, and it is anticipated that the congregation will have expended about $20,000 before the work is completed.

PRIZE WINNERS AT M. E. PICNIC

A very large crowd attended the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school picnic at Oakland park yesterday afternoon and evening. Prizes were awarded the following winners:

100 yard dash, won by Ornan Morgan.

50 yard dash for girls won by Edith Keys.

Lollypop race for beginners and primary scholars won by those securing the most lollypops.

Shoe shuffle for boys won by Edward Kibler.

Race through the clouds won by the side led by Miss Edith Hazlett.

Bucket contest for married women won by Mrs. Walter Byerly, Mrs. Harry Carson, Mrs. Raymond Small and Mrs. Raymond Chester.

Standing broad jump won by Mac Jamison.

PLANS EXTENSIVE INCREASE OF QUAIL

Arrangements for trapping of quail for feeding during the winter and breeding on a more extensive scale than ever have been made by the State Game Commission. The results of trapping last year are reported to have been excellent.

The service before he was twenty years of age. He was 21 years old on the 5th of last December.

He was a member of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Charleroi Lodge, No. 494, B. P. O. E., the Viking Club and Charleroi Post No. 22, American Legion who will accord to him the honors of war at the burial services in the cemetery.

He is survived by his father and mother and by one brother, Everly Jobs. His father is a letter carrier in the Charleroi post office, while his mother is prominent in the Dames of Malta.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the late home, the Elks giving their ritualistic ceremony, while the regular services will be in charge of Rev. John R. Burson of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church. Interment will follow in the Monongahela cemetery.

Priority Order Of Railroads Aggravates Conditions At Mills

The priority order on coal cars, which is being enforced by the railroad company, will have a very serious effect on the mills of the Pittsburgh district if it is not modified before the middle of August. This is particularly true of the Donora mills where finished product is being piled high in the yards because of lack of proper cars to handle the product.

According to the regulations promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and being enforced by the railroad officials, only cars with sidings 36 inch high are available for mills to ship their products. Mill officials class such cars as "flats," and say they cannot put any kind of load on them, and as fast as they are shunted into mill yards for loading they are shunted out by the mill management at the other end of the yard. This sort of "hide and seek" policy has been kept up for the past three weeks. During which time the Donora mills have made no shipments to outside points of any consequence, and unless there is a change in this policy, the mills will be compelled to close down. The situation is not very encouraging and if the mills are compelled to close it will be forced into idleness against their will.

GOLF LINKS ARE ATTRACTIVE TO MANY SENTIMENT RULED IN RETAINING NAME

Each fine evening at the Monongahela Valley Country Club sees the new golf course dotted with members of the organization who are beginning to the diversion most pleasing. There are new visitors at the club each evening and the splendid outdoor setting of the institution makes it regrettable that the bigway trippers cannot improve. Quite a number of prominent Charleroi citizens, who are members of the club are utilizing the facilities of the golf course to obtain a knowledge of the intricacies of the game. One of the best features of the club is the fact that it is drawing residents of the four towns of the valley together in their interests, making something that has not hitherto existed for the good of the valley in general. Work on the new club house is progressing and the grounds are generally being put in excellent condition. It is the expectation of the members that the club house will be completed and ready for the accommodation of members not later than the middle of September.

Two Brothers Arrested In Detroit While Trying To Dispose of Bonds

ONE IS RELEASED ON BAIL

The Finleyville bank robbery may be on the way to being cleared up. Bonds valued at $37,100, taken from Benjamin and David Davis, when they were arrested Wednesday afternoon in Detroit, Michigan, after attempting to dispose of the securities in a brokerage office in that city were on Thursday identified as part of the loot obtained from the First National Bank of Finleyville, on the 24th of May.

FINE PROMOTION FOR J. B. YOHE

J. B. Yohe, after 37 years service with the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie railroad and who has been general manager since 1906, has been appointed vice president and general manager by A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central System. The appointment, effective at once, makes Mr. Yohe the chief executive officer of the road in this district. His headquarters will be in Pittsburgh. He began his career with the P. & E. in 1883 when he was appointed trainmaster, a position he held until 1888, when he was made chief dispatcher and superintendent of telegraph. In 1890 he became master of transportation and in 1895 superintendent. He was appointed general superintendent January 25, 1898 and became general manager January 1, 1906. Mr. Yohe is a native of Benteleville.

According to a telegram from that city the men say the ywere asked to sell the bonds by a former saloonkeeper of Toledo, Ohio, where David Davis, who is aged 25, operates a dry cleaning establishment. His brother is in the real estate business in Detroit. Benjamin Davis was released on $10,000 bail a few hours after he was arrested, while his brother remained in jail.

The two men were taken into custody by Detroit detectives in a broker's office while trying to dispose of the bonds. From correspondence in the pockets of the brothers it may be possible for officers to obtain information which may lead to the discovery of additional bonds which are believed to have been stolen and converted into cash.

The First National Bank at Finleyville was sent a telegram to check up on the securities which were lost and forward it at once to the Detroit officers.

David Davis denied intentional wrongdoing, but he was obviously nervous when taken into custody. He said that a Toledo man told him that he and his brother had a chance to make some money and they undertook to sell the bonds as a business proposition.

Two men are now in the Washington jail, charged with complicity in the bank robbery and it is possible with this additional clue, that the entire gang may be apprehended. It is possible that the members of the gang may become known, in which case the police of the country will be placed on their trial.

The Finleyville bank robbery was one of the sensations of this part of the state and occurred at the noon hour, when no one was in the bank except the teller, who was overpowered, and rendered unconscious from a blow on the head by one of the robbers. The bank has a standing reward for the return of the securities.

About the only kind of valuable advice is the kind you pay for, and all of that isn't.

Probably the best way to bring the In 1880 failing was fashionable; Germans to time would be to compel them to give their brewing machinery.

ONE REASON FOR SHORTAGE OF CARS

One week ago 149 empty coal cars were set out from the Donora mill yards on what is called the south track. For four days they were not moved. Late Sunday afternoon a Pennsylvania engine finally got around to move them.

A railroad man is quoted as saying that possibly here is one reason for the shortage of cars at the mines. There is little haste in keeping the cars moving. In the meantime it is stated on good authority that finished stock in the Donora mills is moving very slowly although materials are being worked up and the stock rooms and the yards are being filled with stuff for shipment.

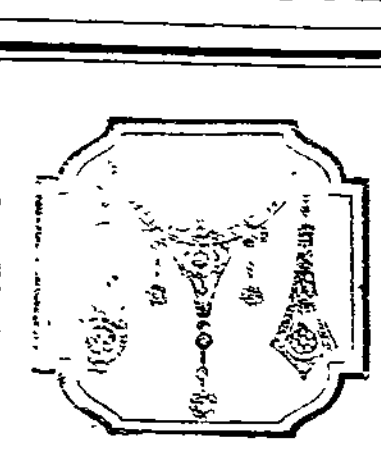

Railroad men are at a loss to understand why the Pennsylvania should lay off men at this time when there is every evidence that freight is not being kept moving. The Donora incident is said to be only one of many other places where cars are left standing for days at a time instead of moving them as soon as unloaded.

ONE END OF PROFITTEERING

The principal mills of the American Woollen Company have been shut down for an indefinite period because of cancellation of orders and lack of orders for next season. In Lawrence, Mass., alone about 14,000 persons have been thrown out of employment. In all 40,000 are idle.

The American Woollen Company will be remembered as one of the big industrial concerns most widely accused of profiteering at a time when such accusations were most vehement after the armistice. Federal indictments followed and are blamed by the company for its troubles. Its own financial statements, after taking out tremendous salaries for executives, high wages for workers, and every possible item of expense, showed a net profit for 1917 of $13,823,155, or 23 per cent of its capital stock of $60,000,000 against a pre-war net annual income of $1,600,000.

Its employees naturally took advantage of this prosperity to force up their own wages. Call it profiteering legitimate business or what you will, the fact remains that the company and its employees took advantage of an extraordinary situation to wring from the public every cent they could wring. The result, aided and abetted by similar action in allied or associate industries was to raise the price of clothing to unprecedented heights. The result of that, in turn, was to check the demand for clothing. So now retailers are cancelling their orders and reducing their demand for next season's goods.

The final result has been to close the mills. Greed has killed the goose which laid the golden eggs. The income of the company and of its thousands of employees has been cut off entirely. Production has been stopped. The wool market is in a state of stagnation. Growers are so hard hit that many of them face bankruptcy. Lack of production threatens again to raise the price of clothing. The whole situation offers an illuminating illustration of the fallacy of either producers or workers demanding more than the market will bear.

WOMEN AS JURORS

England, which has given nation-wide suffrage to women while we still withhold it, is obligingly going to try out for us that vexed question of women jurors, says the Brooklyn Eagle. Parliament has passed an act making women liable to jury duty. Under our and the British system jury duty is a logical corollary of citizenship. Any class which accepts the privileges and advantages of citizenship should bear its responsibilities also. One of the most burdensome of these responsibilities is jury duty, yet men are excused from it for special and weighty reasons. If women are to vote and hold office they should in fairness carry their share of the load, unless they shall be found in practice unfitted to do that particular work well. That is something that can only be told by trying and the English are going to make the trial, for which we should be grateful to them.

Amos Pinchot, who was one of the prime movers of the committee of 43 which had in charge the formation of a new party, gives his opinion of what he terms the "fiasco." He says the "Committee of Forty-eight" was infiltrated by a lot of honest, well-meaning, mushheads, who without any economic ideas, whatever, cherished the simple faith that you could form a union of forces by getting dissonant elements under the same roof, irrespective of how thoroughly they differed in principle. Which likely means that Amos will not be an enthusiast for the third party ticket.

You don't fish for whales in creeks, but many a man thinks the world is all wrong because he does not find the Big Opportunity in a place that a big opportunity wouldn't have room to turn around in.

RASPBERRY COUSIN OF ROSE

Relationship Conceded, and Tomato, Pepper and Tobacco Are All Members of Same Family.

Raspberries, blackberries and all their varieties are "Rosaceae" and closely related to the common wild rose. There is not much apparent resemblance between raspberry and the rose. Yet a botanist can tell you that they are both members of one family, and that this soft-same family includes the carrot as well as various aromatic plants such as nutmeg and coriander. Celery, too, comes in the same category.

Quite So.

A friend who is not in need is a friend indeed.—Answers, London.

In an editorial on the financial rewards of the late Amelia E. Barr the New York World sets forth that sheer love of writing always produces the best results. "We object," says the Sun. "A canvass of writers who achieve the best results, our guess is, would show that nine-tenths of them don't love to write. There is a good deal of bunk about it, and it is hard to get honest answers: many writers are afraid to say they don't enjoy the writing job."

Anyway, He Found It.

It was on October 12 I happened to meet my neighbor's little girl on the street during school hours. I asked her how it happened that she was not at school, and she looked at me with some surprise and answered: "Why, don't you know, it's Columbus day today?" Then, with seeming pity for me in my ignorance, she added: "Columbus discovered America. It was last year, I think."—Chicago Tribune.

STATE TROOPERS PREVENT SUNDAY GAMBLING

Five state troopers were in guard about the fields of Donora on Sunday for the purpose of putting a check on the widespread gambling that has been going on openly about that town. A regular patrol was made of the town during the afternoon and evening but no arrests were reported. It is supposed that the regular gamblers managed to "get in the car" when the state troopers were sighted.

PESKY BED BUGS

Bedbugs lay an average of seven eggs per day. Under favorable conditions they hatch in five days of which two-thirds are females. They mature to adult size and are capable of laying in four weeks. How many bedbugs would you have in a year if you left one female or egg unmolested for one year? To rid the pesky bedbugs, you can readily see how necessary it is to use a preparation that will kill the eggs as well as the live ones. P. D. Q. has been demonstrated by the leading Hospitals, Hotels and Railroad Companies that the safest and most economical way to stop future generations of bedbugs, roaches, fleas and ants is to use the new discovery "Pesky Devils".

Quicker "P. D. Q." A 35c package of P. D. Q. makes a quart, enough to kill a million bedbugs, roaches, fleas and cockroaches and at the same time destroy their eggs. Impossible for them to exist when P. D. Q. is properly used. Free, pat-on spot in every package to get the pesky devil in the hard-to-get-at places and save the juice. Special Hospital and Hotel size $2.50—make five gallons of P. D. Q.—your druggist has it or can get it for you, or sent prepaid upon receipt of price by the Owl Chemical Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Success of P. D. Q. has caused imitations; genuine P. D. Q. is never peddled.

Men Take Care OF YOUR HAIR WHILE IT'S THERE

Does your scalp itch for a real dandruff ridding cleanser? Your scalp is not rightly cleaned if dandruff falls on your coat collar and shoulders. If dandruff starts, falling hair results. Haphazard way of neglecting the hair and scalp in this age of germs is a thing of the past. Hair needs care. CRUDOLEUM is the efficient combatant for dandruff and its accompanying germ.

You may wash your scalp twice a week with soap and water but the great hair wrecker—dandruff, and its germ is not dispelled by this process, and soon flourishes again in all its glory. We urge you to prove CRUDOLEUM as professional hair dressers prove it. Just take 35c and go to F. J. John's drug store and say, "I want one of those large bottles of CRUDOLEUM," and then take it home and prove it out. Mr. F. J. John who is the agent in Charleroi is authorized to return your money, if CRUDOLEUM does not do all of the above and more. Its healing touch, then comes the change. It will change all your ideas on scalp care. If your druggist does not keep it, send us 40c and parcel post will bring it to your door by return mail. Wm. M. FRUIT IS FALLING

Farmers report apples and peaches falling off the trees and if this continues the crop will not be nearly so large as was expected. The cause for the falling fruit is given as the late frosts, which did not hurt the fruit, but paralyzed the stems, with the result that when the fruit matures to a size too heavy for the weakened stems it falls off.

MADE HIS READING THOROUGH

Daniel Webster Seldom Satisfied With Only One Perusal of a Favorite Author.

Daniel Webster was one of the most earnest and intelligent of readers at his life long. His favorite authors were read and reread with a passionate fondness. His critical conversations upon the standard poets and essayists and critics of the English language are still remembered and quoted by those who were present to hear when the mood and opportunity of discourse were upon him. How he came to be so well read and intelligent a reader is explained in his autobiography. Whatever he read, he read so often and so carefully that he learned to repeat it. "We had a few books," he says, "that I read them once or twice was nothing; we thought they were all to be got by heart." A small circulating library had been established in the neighborhood by his father and other persons, and among the books which he obtained from it was the "Spectator." "I could not understand why it was necessary that the author of the 'Spectator' should take such great pains to prove that Chevy Chase was a good story; that was the last thing I doubted." He tells us, "In those boyish days there were two things which I did dearly love, viz., reading and playing—passions which did not cease to struggle when boyhood was over." From "Books and Reading," by Noah Porter.

EGYPT'S BOOK OF THE DEAD

Contents Throw Interesting Light on the Morals of the People of That Ancient Period.

"Book of the Dead," more properly called the Book of the Manifestation of Light is the name of the most famous book of the ancient Egyptians, according to the Detroit News. It dates from the fourth dynasty, 3582 to 3536 B. C., and is written in Egyptian hieroglyphics. It contains prayers and exorcisms for the benefit of the soul on its long perilous journey in the lower world, as well as minute instructions by which it may vanquish the frightful monsters that will assail it before reaching the first gates of heaven.

The text of the "Book of the Dead," carefully revised and with illustrations, was published by M. Edouard Naville in 1886 translations also having appeared in several European languages. The following sentences from the book, in the soul's defense before Osiris, are interesting as throwing light on Egyptian morals: "I have not been intoxicated; I have not told secrets; I have not told falsehoods; I have not defrauded; I have not slandered; I have not caused tears; I have given food to the hungry, drink to the thirsty and clothes to the naked."

Brothers Only in Adversity.

Men have never felt themselves to be brothers in good fortune, in pride, in ambition in success, in the emotion born of conquest and of enjoyment of earthly blessings; but in the face of danger, in misfortune, in times of trial, Guglielmo Ferrero writes in the Atlantic.

Christianity could bid men to regard one another and to treat one another as brothers, because at the same time it told them that they were weak and imperfect creatures, needing to assist one another and always menaced by the enemy they held concealed within themselves. The nineteenth century, on the contrary told men that they were brothers, but told them at the same time that they were destined, one and all, to be monarchs of the universe.

And in order to be monarchs of the universe, men and nations, instead of embracing like brothers, threw themselves upon one another, arms in hand.

It was said of Edmund Burke, who was a great reader and a great thinker also, that he read every book as if he were never to see it a second time, and thus made it his own, a possession for life. Were his example imitated, much time would be saved that is spent in recalling things half remembered, and in taking up the stitches of lost thoughts. A greater loss than that of time would be avoided—the loss of the dignity and power which are possessed by him who keeps his mind tense, active, and wakeful. It is very common to give the rule thus: "Whatever is worth reading at all is worth reading well." If by "well" is intended with the utmost stretch of attention, it is not literally true; for there are books which serve for pastime and amusement, books which can be run through. From "Books and Reading," by Noah Porter.

Tattooing Made an Art.

Tattooing is an art so old that its origin is lost to historical records, having been practiced when the cave-men went out to club their fellows. In the Marquesas islands, the most distant and most mysterious of South sea archipelagos, tattooing reached its highest development, and there it was the most beautiful form of art known.

For a man in the Marquesas to lack the tattooed Stars of Terror upon his face, and to have a bare countenance, was to be a poltroon and despised by the tribe. Frederick O'Brien says in the Century Magazine that to achieve a fairly complete picture on one's body meant many months of intense suffering and the expenditure of much wealth.

WEAR BELLS ON THEIR TOES

Men of Dakar, French West Africa, Also Carry Surprising Assortment of Other Trinkets.

Men of Dakar, the seat of French West Africa, are noted for their peculiar wear of bells on their toes and on their fingers, and a surprising assortment of trinkets, mostly made of brass. The bells, however, are not worn as ornaments, except in their ability to tell.

On the West African tribes, the bells are worn by some experts to have been at the time masters of the Mediterranean. They have many times been captured and driven out of their territories, but always manage to find their way back by their peculiar character and a persistent love of freedom.

The Berber women have fought by their husbands' sides, and their morality is of a high character. In Dakar can also be seen the Seters, a tribe of natives that worship the snake and believe in the transmigration of souls. A height of six feet and six inches is not uncommon among the men of the Seters.

Among the most intelligent of the natives are the Funtis, whose tales betray lofty ideals and poetic imagination that is comparable with early Greek and Norse lore. Their horsemanship is famous, and their cavalry is noted for daring and valor. The intelligence of their women and the respect accorded them is attested by the proverb: "Let a female slave enter a household and she soon becomes mistress."

DIDN'T TELL ALL THE STORY

Man Really Had Performed Remarkable Feat, but He Had Great Reason for Hurry.

One of the very substantial men of a thriving town in the West is named Garry McIntyre. One day, in conversation with a number of soldiers from a military post near by, he said:

"I understand you lads are going on a hike. When you reach Snake river, take a good look at it. It's full of undercurrents and eddies. Boys, I am the only living man who ever swam that river."

Several days later the men crossed the Snake river on a cable ferry. The ferryman chanced to inquire, quite casually, of a waiting soldier:

"Do you know a man down in your country by the name of Garry McIntyre? They tell me he has accumulated a lot of money."

"I was talking to him only the other day," said the soldier. "He told me he swam Snake river once."

"That's right, he did," said the ferryman. "He sure did; but we were all shooting at him."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eagle as an Emblem.

They are two different species of eagle. The American eagle is the white-headed or bald eagle, while the German is known as the imperial eagle, probably identically original with the golden eagle of Europe. Our American eagle first appeared as an emblem on the great seal of the United States, adopted June 20, 1782; its design was a shield on the breast of an American bald eagle. The device is stated to have been largely suggested to John Adams when minister to Great Britain by Sir John Prestwich, English antiquary. The eagle was first used on United States coins in 1788. The Persians, Egyptians, Romans, French under Napoleon, Austrians, Russians and Prussians have all used on their standards the imperial eagle, emblem of power: the double-headed eagle of Austria and of Russia signified power east and west. The German eagle is the single-headed black eagle, with red claws and tongue and the crown of Charlemagne over the head.

To fall in love means the surrendering of one's normal capacity for judgment, says a modern novelist. It is impossible both to love and criticize. Love turns every goose into a swan. Love is the greatest of all camouflage artists. It makes ugliness appear beauty, cruelty seem like kindness, inanity has a sort of genius. When you fall in love with an ass or a cad or an empty-headed young woman with very moderate looks (as you frequently do) and your friends point out the truth to you (as they certainly will), you either lose your temper or your friends, or spend your whole life in inventing mitigating circumstances. In either case you are inevitably and quite properly regarded as a fool. Do not imagine that you can love with discretion, win the thrills, at the same time retaining the reputation of well-balanced sanity. That is impossible—Exchange.

Babylonian Relics.

The collection of clay tablets and bricks in the Babylonian section of Yale university numbers now more than ten thousand and it is being steadily added to by judicious purchase. It is the second largest collection of Babylonian tablet records in the world. Oxford's being first. In the matter of undeciphered and unpublished material, Professor Clay makes for it the claim of the most important collection.

BIRD HIDES NEST CLEVERLY

South American Fiery Topaz Known
Well the Value of Matching Colors to Deceive Enemies.

Perhaps the most wonderful thing about the fiery topaz humming bird is the manner in which it makes its nest.
In this respect it is a past master of camouflage for a very observant person or animal could be quite close to one of these nests and never be able to distinguish it from the bough or trunk of the tree to which it is attached. This nest is truly remarkable on account of its structure, and in appearance it resembles a small, curled up leaves of the trees in the Amazon region where it makes its home.
A very interesting feature in the nest is the fact that it is made of these birds weave it on in such a manner that it is difficult to see just where the bird or nest is. The nest is composed of a kind of fungus which the birds gather and match their colors
so well that camouflage effect is complete.

As might be guessed from the name,
the fiery topaz is mostly a brilliant scarlet, which contrasts beautifully with the brown and black feathers on the neck, as well as the green on the lower part of the back. There are no more harmonious colors than green and red, recognized everywhere as an outdoor combination that is hard to surpass, so one can imagine that the fiery topaz compares well with the birds of the South American jungles.

Although a member of the hummingbird family, the fiery topaz is noted for the remarkably large size that it sometimes attains, as the entire length is often as great as eight inches.

DREAM OF AMPUTATED LIMBS

Feelings of Those Who Have Lost
Arm or Leg Can Only Be Cured
by Time.

Dr. Edred M. Corner, the famous London surgeon, has been studying the dreams of persons who have lost an arm or leg by amputation, and he reports some interesting observations to "The Practitioner." It is well known that after amputation the lost limb is still felt, at any rate for a time, and such sensations are called "phantom limbs."

Dr. Corner says these are unusual among the young but frequent among the older, and they pass away with time, after eight months or a year the patient being unconscious of the lost limb except when he thinks about it.
A man who has lost one limb may dream that he has lost both or that he has lost the wrong one, or that the one amputated is still there but seems awkward or hurts; the dreamer cannot bend the phantom leg or arm or finds it stiff and heavy.

Badly fitting artificial limbs aggravate the sensations, evidently by irritating the severed nerves. Cold, damp, changes of weather and absence of occupation for the mind increase the sensations. The nearer the trunk the limb has been cut off the worse are the pains and the longer they are likely to continue.

Sometimes an operation or massage will cure a persistent case, but generally it has to be left to time.

Controlling Crows.

Various methods have been tried to keep crows away from poultry, most of which were ineffectual. One farmer tried five different methods. The first was a scarecrow, but this had little or no effect. In the second place corn soaked in strychnine solution was scattered on a field of planted corn, but no dead ones were found. No corn was pulled and there was no appreciable decrease in the number of chickens taken. Third, a steel trap was set on a pole near the chicken yard, without success. Fourth, white twine was run on the stakes around and across the chicken yard; this kept the crows from the yard, but the young chicks would get out and would then fall a prey to the crows. Finally a crow was shot and hung on a pole near the chicken yard, after which there was no further trouble.

Slum dwellers, who live in narrow and crowded streets, are pale and under-sized. Improper nutrition has a good deal to do with it, but that is only one cause. All efforts to improve the condition of the poor in cities by giving them fresh air and cleaner quarters are in the direction of giving them more light.

Any physician will tell you that ex-posure in the open air is vastly more beneficial than any obtainable in a gymnasium. The chief reason why is that when you are playing tennis or golf, or riding a horse or a bicycle, or amusing yourself otherwise out of doors, you are getting the benefit of unlimited light.

X-Ray Boon to Humanity.

"It is through the infinitely little," Victor Hugo once wrote, "that the infinitely great overwhelms us." That thought comes back with the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the X-ray, discovered during the spring and summer of 1895 by William Roentgen, a professor of physics. His achievement disclosed an emanation which could be used in physical investigations with searching power; it furnished a means by which "shadow" pictures could be taken of the interiors of opaque objects and proved of priceless value to surgeons by enabling them to locate obstructions and abnormalities in the human body.

TREASURE OF PIRATE GOLD

Remarkable Collection That Is Displayed in Museum of the University of Pennsylvania.

The largest collection of the gold work of the Aztecs, the Incas and other ancient Central American gold workers, whose civilization was destroyed by the Spaniards seeking the legend, is on permanent display at the Museum of the University of Pennsylvania. The collection contains $500,000 worth of plate gold, some of which has never been melted down because of its exquisite workmanship.

Part of the ancient collection had been buried in the mountains of Columbia by the Indians to save the treasure from invaders. This part was discovered by the museum of the University of Pennsylvania just after it had been brought to New York by its discoverers. The other part is composed of treasures handed down to a Spanish family descended from some of the early Spanish royalty, who sent the pieces from shipments sent home, perhaps by Cortez and his followers. The latter part was picked up in Paris recently by Dr. George Horton Gorton, director of the university museum.

The Columbian part of the collection contains nearly 100 pieces, from brooches to beads, bracelets, girdles, earrings and even golden staples, and a helmet of pure gold. The Paris collection of 84 pieces contains two pure gold idols nine inches high and three inches wide at the shoulders. The Incas collection also contains a death mask of thin, beaten gold.

PURPOSE IN SELF-TORTURE

People of Northern New Mexico Have High Object in Infliction of Bodily Punishment.

A passion play takes place yearly in the Raton and Sandia mountains of northern New Mexico. A group of people living in this district have for centuries each Lenten season gone through a series of self-inflicted bodily tortures, enduring their agonies in the belief that these barbarities will absolve them from past and future sins.
The passion play is said to be so savage and realistic that at times performers have died as a result of injuries received while taking part in it.

These people are known as Los Hermanos Penitentes, or the Penitent brotherhood. The Penitentes are of Mexican origin, with a marked strain of Indian blood. They are densely ignorant, not many being able to read Spanish, and only a very few are familiar with English. Hardly one in ten has ever been a hundred miles away from the isolated mountain settlements where they make their homes.
They keep small flocks of cattle and sheep and sometimes mine for gold and silver. They live in mud and crude stone houses, as did their ancestors two and three hundred years ago.

Door Mats Grown in America.

Growing of door mats has been carried out for some time in certain parts of America, the only articles required being some pieces of old sacking, or any similar material, and common grass seed, says Detroit News.
The sacking is cut to the desired size and shape and then moistened with water and placed on level soil. Grass seed is then sown rather thickly over the surface of the sacking, the whole covered with paper so as to shade it from the strong sun and keep it protected for about a week, at the end of which time the seed will have germinated. The cover is then removed.
Every three or four days the mat is moved to a fresh position to prevent the roots fastening themselves to the soil beneath. After a week or ten days, when the mat has dried and the grass turned a nice shade of green, the mat is ready for use. The little grass plants hold on to the canvas most tenaciously, even when they are dead, this being due to the fact that the root hairs become entangled in the rough hairs of the sacking and are extremely difficult to remove.

We are living on a globe we call solid, but in fact it is plastic and changeable, with a gaseous ocean above us and a liquid one below it.
From these three factors all organic life is created, and upon them it depends for its existence. Vegetable life derives its life and body from certain chemical combinations, induced by the action of the sun's radiations. Animal life depends on vegetable life, and also serves other animals as food. All these return to mother earth and thus pay the debt they borrowed. From this we learn that what is death and destruction of one is life of another. Wherefore what we call waste and destruction is only a necessary and unavoidable process of the living functions of mother earth.—Exchange.

Remarkable Transformation.

John had been with his father on the occasion of his maiden effort with a car. Waiting for friends, in another car, before starting on a pleasure trip, an inadvertent turn too far to the side of the road had resulted in being nicely caught in about a foot of fine sticky mud. The friends arriving had made merry over the task of pushing out the car. John, later in the day, excitedly describing the affair, had this, among other things, to say: "And then they turned all the ladies into men, and they all helped to just push the car right out of the sticky mud."

Employees' Initiative.
Nothing pleases an employer more than to find that employees have been useful and helpful in doing things that they were not told to do. It shows the spirit of initiative; it indicates the ambition to get on, a willingness to pay the price. The progressive employer has little use for the employee who never does anything he is not told to do. Originality, inventiveness, resourcefulness are passports to his favor—and to promotion.—The New Success.

Warm and Cool Colors.
The warm or advancing colors, which arouse the senses quickly, are those having yellow or red predominating, as yellow green, yellow orange, orange, red orange, red and violet. The cool or receding colors, which soothe the nerve senses, are blue and the colors in which blue predominates, as blue green, green violet and blue violet. They are called cool colors because of their association with water, ice and the sky.

Spoke a Little Hastily.
John Brougher tells this one: "One colored gent said to another: 'Ev' time I hugs my teezany and kisses her, she just giggles and squirms alarming.' To which the other responded: 'I say she does.' 'Huh?' asked the belligerent swain, as his eye took on a glitter. 'I say, does she?' was the eager change in the response.—Houston Post.

Entire Village of Wood.
The Russian village is built principally of wood and roofed with wood, or with straw and stones. For this reason there are so many fires that, according to statistics, one-fifth of all the peasant cottages burn down every year, or putting it in another way, every house burns down after five years. This seems improbable, but it is reliable information.

Coal in the Ice Regions.
Geologists have discovered immense deposits of coal in Spitzbergen, and it is now apparent that, in spite of ice, cold and fog, Spitzbergen is a land fraught with many commercial possibilities. The coal is practically all on the surface, and deep mining is unnecessary.

The Enemy Seal.
In Labrador the fishermen regard seals as their deadly enemies. One authority says that he has known a seal to haunt a net so persistently that to get any fish at all the owner had to watch all the while at one end.

Triumphed Over Misfortune.
The famous French artist, Gustave Dore, was born and reared in the shadow of Strasburg cathedral, says Mrs. Betham-Edwards, in "The Heart of the Vosges." At the age of eight years he broke his right arm, but became, as if by magic, ambidextrous. As he lay in bed he cheerily drew pictures all day long with his left hand.

Deep Degradation.
"I haven't seen Pilkington for a week." "No, he hasn't been out of the house since his accident." "Was he seriously injured?" "No, but he feels the disgrace deeply." "Disgrace?" "Yes. After living in the heart of the city all his life he went to the country one day last week and was run over by a milk cart."

Quite Sure.
Patricia came tumbling down a flight of stairs, and her mother, badly frightened, inquired if she was hurt. When Patricia regained her breath she loudly proclaimed her feelings: "I is killed, mother! I know I is killed!"

Good Advice for Parents.
Children readily copy what they see and hear, and as a consequence they should not hear squabbles among adults, and should be given every chance to observe courtesy.—Exchange.

To preserve a friend, three things are necessary; to honor him present, praise him absent, and assist him in his necessities.—Italian Saying

Little Things Count.
A comma is a little thing, but so is a cinder in your eye. In the wrong place, little things can cause a great deal of trouble.

Combined Register.
Designed for retail stores which do a credit business is a combined cash register, credit register and adding machine.

Smallest Inhabited Spot.
The island holding the Eddystone lighthouse is the smallest bit of all the year around inhabited land in the world.

Silk Once More Valuable.
At one time silk was so valuable that it was sold for its own weight in gold, literally.

Surnames.
Surnames began to be used first among the nobility in 1200.

BOAT LINE PLANNED FOR LOWER RIVER

As the result of the increasing demands for transportation of heavy freight by the waterways route from Pittsburgh to lower river ports, a new transportation company is being organized to operate a line of steamboats and barges out of Pittsburgh, and on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. The new line is seeking to purchase towboats and barges which will be used to carry coal, iron steel and other heavy freight.

They will first operate the line between Pittsburgh and Memphis and later extend operations to New Orleans. It is reported that 25 large corporations of Memphis are backing the project and that many large firms of Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, Evansville and other cities intend to join them. According to statement one of the reasons for the organization of the new line is to prevent a coal scarcity in southern cities with the prevailing railroad conditions.

OIL STORAGE RULES ARE VERY STRINGENT

All municipalities of the state must comply with the regulations of the State Bureau of Fire Protection in the matter of storage and handling of gasoline and other inflammable materials, according to an opinion of Deputy Attorney General Frank M. Hunter to Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the state police. The act of July 1, 1919, gives the state police department authority to enforce rules and regulations governing the storage and handling of all inflammable and combustible chemical products, substances or materials, and the opinion of the Attorney General's offices is that such regulations have the force of a law. Some municipalities have ordinances which are inconsistent with the state regulations, while others have ordinances which are more stringent.

TO WORK TOP VEIN IN GREENE COUNTY

A deal was closed on Monday at Waynesburg in which E. E. Morris purchased the Joseph Patton farm, between Rices Landing and Clarksville. The farm contains 170 acres and the consideration was $16,500. The farm was purchased for the purpose of operating the Hill or Waynesburg vein of coal. The Hill vein outcrops on the tract near the Pennsylvania railroad, which runs along the edge of the Patton tract. Applications for sidings have been made and the work of erecting 100 houses will be started in a short time. The company will be known as the Jefferson Coal company, which will be incorporated. Operations will begin at once.

DONORA COMPLAINS OF NOISY MOTORS

It is said that practically all of the physicians of Donora have complained to President G. E. Koedel of the borough council concerning the violation of the automobile cutoff law in the borough. In making the complaint they state that many persons who are ill and nervous are being greatly annoyed by the machine gun action of some automobiles and motorcycles. There are some drivers in Charleroi that should be warned over the manner in which they run their machines. They pay no attention to the prohibition against the use of cutouts, and charge through the streets, making a fearful racket, regardless of the noise they make.

VESTA COAL COMPANY PURCHASES BIG FARM

The Vesta Coal company of Pittsburgh, has purchased a tract of 183.97 acres of land, excepting the Pittsburgh vein of coal already owned by the said company, situated in Westmont township, this county, for $26,000. The property belonged to Byron Mathews, who occupies the premises, and Mrs. Isadora Wherry and Mrs. Margaret Howden of Scenery Hill.

MID-WEEK BASEBALL AT FAYETTE CITY

Fayette City has been assured of mid-week base ball for the balance of the season. All local games will be played at Brightwell field Wednesday afternoon and a prosperous season is looked for. A feature which will serve to make the games popular is the fact that all the business houses of Fayette City have agreed to close Wednesday afternoon, each week through July and August, which will give merchants and clerks as well as many other people in the community an opportunity to witness the games. Manager Henry Wilson has a good team, and is preparing to back some of the strongest nines in this section of the state for games at Fayette City.

THIRTEEN FATALITIES IN COUNTY IN JUNE

Washington county industrial workers suffered 13 fatal accidents during June, according to a statement issued on Monday by Dr. Clifford B. Connelly, Commissioner of the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry. In May nine fatal accidents were reported in this county.

George Newton, who has been spending a vacation at Mt. Clemens, returned home on Thursday.

WOULD CONFINE LAW TO THOSE UNFIT

President Wilson is strongly opposed to the retirement under the civil service retirement law of civil service employees who have reached the retirement age of 65 years, but who are in good physical condition and desire to continue work. It is his desire that a uniform interpretation be placed on the measure, which becomes effective July 22, and which cabinet officers have construed to provide arbitrarily for retirement of employees at the age of 65. Quite a number of employees at Lock 4 and other points along the river in the government employ have received notices to retire on the 20th of August.

It seems to be quite easy for some people to pick up several barrels of whiskey at a time, but it may not be quite so easy to explain the matter to the federal authorities. It begins to look as if the lid was being clamped down a little bit tighter on the illegal sales which are reported to be so frequent in the Pittsburgh district.

The Bishop's Boys.

The first Bishop of North Carolina, John Stark Ravenscroft, generally spoke of the clergy under him as if they were his own children, and Mr. Marshall Delancey Hayward in his book, "Lives of the Bishops of North Carolina," says that Bishop Ravenscroft loved them like children, and was loved in return as a father is loved. "I wouldn't give my fourteen boys for your whole diocese!" was his proud declaration to a rector of a fashionable church in New York.

Hindu Youth Precocious.

A tourist travelling in India wrote home that he was astonished by the precocity of the Hindu children, says the Home Journal. Many of them are skilled workmen at an age when other children are learning the alphabet. One of the most expert carvers in wood he saw was a boy of seven, and many of the handsomest and most costly rugs and carpets are woven by children not yet in their teens.

Cleaning Books.

Most family libraries are disfigured by one or two once lovely volumes in unpractical bindings of pale silk or white leather dimmed by grime. Art gum or a sort of kneaded eraser may clean them. If not, try fine powdered pumice, lightly applied with a clean chamois. This is what picture dealers use to clean the margins of old prints. It roughens the surface less than rubber.

Peculiar Superstitions.

No one can give any reason why a horseshoe is considered lucky. The original belief was that it kept out witches. A novel wart cure is the placing of a number of pebbles in a bag, corresponding with the number of warts. The warts are supposed to disappear when the bag is thrown away, and the person who finds the bag is expected to find the warts as well.

Proper Care of Tools.

All good tools should be wrapped up, otherwise they will rust, and rust dulls their cutting edges. The careful carpenter wraps his tools in a wooden cloth, well oiled. The careful chauffeur wraps all polished tools before putting them in the tool box and keeps them away from the storage battery, the fumes of which will quickly rust them.

Good Friday.

Good Friday has been observed since the earliest days of Christianity in memory of the crucifixion of Jesus Christ, which event is said to have occurred Friday, April 15, 29, A. D., or April 3, 33, A. D. The expression "Good (probably God's) Friday" is said to be peculiar to the Church of England. Good Friday is observed the Friday before Easter.

Get Goodyear Value in Tires for Small Cars

Don't be misled by very cheaply priced tires, for tire economy is not a matter of what tires cost originally but of what tire service costs in the end.

True Goodyear mileage and economy are built into Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30½x3- and 31x4-inch sizes, in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking one of these sizes, you can equip it with Goodyear Tires at your nearest Service Station.

Go there for the exceptional value in these tires made possible by Goodyear's resources, experience and demonstrated expertness in tire manufacture.

FEEL NEED OF GRUMBLING

Complaints Absolutely a Source of Enjoyment to Great Mass of Human Beings.

One is as likely to grumble against the people one injures as against the people who injure one. One has to grumble at something or other. A man who can find nothing to complain about simply does not know how to enjoy himself. The New Statesman (London) observes:

Now wouldn't your life be exceedingly flat with nothing whatever to grumble at? That is why people like to read letters in the paper, and also like to explain the huge circulation of one of the notorious weekly papers. The editor was clever enough to see that most people dearly love their grievances, and that if you give them a platform for their grievances you will sell more copies than if you give them only a platform for your own ideals.

We do not mean to say that the mass of human beings are devoid of ideals, but we fear that on ordinary occasions they are a great deal more interested in their complaints. It is just the same with regard to their health. They are much less likely to boast how well they are feeling than how ill they are feeling. A liver complaint means far more to a man than the best digestion. If you allow him he will describe his symptoms—the taste in his mouth, the sudden loss of vision, and what happens if he eats stewed plums. And he tells you all this not in humility but with the vanity of a peacock.

The vanity of an invalid far surpasses any vanity known in healthy men and women. This is, perhaps, one of the compensations of ill health. It gives one something to complain about.

FORESAW CONQUEST OF AIR

But Brother-in-Law of Oliver Cromwell Had Some Ideas That Appear Crude Today.

John Wilkins, who married Robins, sister of Oliver Cromwell, in 1656, had original ideas on flying. He set forth his theories in a book in which he discussed four possible varieties of aviation: By spirits or angels, by the help of fowls, by wings fastened immediately to the body, and by a flying chariot.

Wilkins wrote that the fourth way seemed to him "much more useful than the rest; and that is by a flying chariot which may be so contrived as to carry a man within it; and though the strength of a spring might perhaps be serviceable for the motion of this engine, yet it were better to have it assisted by the labor of some intelligent mover. And, therefore, if it were made big enough to carry sundry persons together, then each of them in their several turn might successfully labor in the causing of this motion."

Wilkins was one of the founders of the Royal Society. He believed it should be "easy to frame an instrument wherein anyone may sit and give such motion unto it as shall convey him aloft through the air."

Another Crafty Fox.

A reader of the Companion tells us the following story of a clever American fox to match a recently published anecdote of a clever English fox. On a November day, he says, a neighbor of his saw a flock of ducks on the opposite side of a small creek that runs into Shinnecock bay.

While trying to get nearer to the ducks, meanwhile keeping himself well hidden and watching them very cautiously through the grass, he was amazed to see a fox that had waded out about forty feet from shore. It was attracting the ducks by gently waving its tail. In a few minutes it would unquestionably have caught a duck had the man not shot it.—Youth's Companion.

Optimism.

Old Lute Lathers is a great fellow to look on the bright side of things said a gaunt Missourian, whom the Forecast notes. He was riding to a town on a load of hay the other day when the roads were so muddy that one wheel dropped into a chuck hole the hay slued, and Lute rolled off and landed on his head in a deep puddle.

"Well, sir," said he, when they had dragged him out, "these 'ere mud roads don't bruise you up like a rock road does. If that had been a hard surfaced road, it would have plumb broke my neck."—Youth's Companion.

Rush-Pith Lens Cleaner.

Almost any ordinary medium that can be used is likely to smear and even scratch a lens in the cleaning. A very perfect lens cleaner can be made by using the medulla or pith of such plants as sunflower, rush or elder, says the Scientific American. Strips of the dry pith are cut and these are fastened with an adhesive to a piece of cork. The pith may be arranged in rows with small spaces in between. The lens is rubbed gently with the novel cleaner and all marks disappear.

Mexico's Fashionable Drive.

The parade ground of Mexico City is the Avenida de San Francisco. This short street extends from the Mexican White House to the Alameda and is only about 24 feet from curb to curb. Here, at the approach of twilight, every smart equipage in the capital comes down the one side of the street and up the other side moves a procession at a slow walk, while everybody looks at everybody else.

The Sleep Ration.

John Wesley experimented in sleep rationing as a cure for insomnia. Finding he woke every night about twelve and lay sleepless for some hours, he decided to go to bed later and rise earlier. The first day he rose at seven instead of eight, the next at six, the next at five, the next at four. By rising at that hour he found he slept without waking throughout his "ration," and thereafter rose at four for good.

Family Pride.

Family pride, as it exists in society, seems to involve an absurdity, inasmuch as the honor of being descended from a great man increases exactly as the degree of consanguinity to him diminishes; for his immediate descendants are as mere upstarts compared to such of his remote posterity as can trace their origin to their great progenitor, back through a period of many years.—John Malcolm.

How Character Is Revealed.

The little things that we do without thinking are the things that tell what we really are. We may desire to possess a character that we have not yet attained, or we may pose for the kind of person we are not, but our unguarded movements betray us. What we are speaks more loudly than what we say.

Doesn't Know It All.

It is when the brand-new graduate begins comparing notes with the men who have been taking a 25 or 40-year post-graduate course in the College of Hard Knocks that he is likely to be told that there is still something to be done in the way of acquiring more wisdom.—Boston Transcript.

Wanted One of Them.

Edith, three, was watching a circus parade. She stood in speechless amazement till the camels came in view, their riders swaying lazily, then turning to her mother she cried: "Oh mother, buy me a rockingchair cow; please buy me a rockingchair cow."

Who Claimed the Flowers?

The minister who made the following announcement seems to have been prepared for untoward results from his preaching. "There are some flowers here," he said, "for those who are sick at the close of this service."—Youth's Companion.
